Elden Ring Dungeon MVC Controller Action using JQuery to update a selected item in a dropdown list I'm creating a small web app using ASP MVC which updates a selected item in a dropdown list when a button is clicked using a JQuery Ajax call to the controller action UpdateParameters. The problem is I'm not able to retrieve the updated value of the selected item in the dropdown list. The code I'm using is as follows: Javascript code: function OnSave(id) { var value = $("#foodItems").val(); var data = '&parameterName=' + value; $.ajax({ url: '@Url.Action("UpdateParameters", "Fluid")', data: data, type: 'POST', success: function (result) { //do something } }); } Controller code: [HttpPost] public ActionResult UpdateParameters(string parameterName) { //do something return RedirectToAction("Index"); } HTML Select a food: -- Select a food -- ">

Features Key:

Elemental Destruction Character Design: Units raise their strength and skill during leveling up to wield strong weapons. The combination of 5 elements was created in a way that allows units to powerfully use the concept of “differential control.” The concept of limitlessly surpassing the opponent by utilizing the element for which they are strong is a key to this game.

Different Elements of Skills: With 5 elements as the basic characteristics, you can readily wield the variety of skills and battle in different ways. The strange and wonderful attribute that flows in from the element may be a new approach to the match-up system for you to utilize.

Blazing Action: While speaking with players locally, we see a strong desire to see a blazin’ action. We will meet this by tilting the screen and supporting vertical action. It will be a part of the game that lets you feel the battle.

Gameplay that satisfies a variety of tastes: Another characteristic of the action we are creating is that units on the weaker side can make use of the support of stronger units to stay alive. In other words, if you are against strong enemies, you are not only in a battle for survival, but one to outdo the opponent.

Propulsion: The game’s physics are what will allow you to move and stand in an action game with ease. It adds a vivid and fantastic level of intensity to the game that brings an unprecedented action forward.

A map currently featuring the Felsenholt Plateau.

The Felsenholt Plateau is once again paying tribute to the most beautiful and wildest place in the world! In 2007, we conducted a survey that asked players how they would like to see the game developed, and gave them a chance to get involved in the game’s development.

“This is the game that all of you have been waiting for! A grand game full of content and yet developed in a very simplified manner. The story is only told through chapter-like segments, but the dialogue as well as the beautifully done character designs are incredibly captivating. It is a game where you can sink countless hours into it all by yourself or play with your friends. If you like action RPGs, definitely pick it up, and if you like the title “Magnaia”, then this is the game for you!” INDOOR TRIP - Gamekult “This game so deserves to be played by every PS4 owner. If you are a fan of RPGs, this is a game you can safely say will not disappoint.” NeoGAF “An absolutely fantastic game.” Suda51 “The art is phenomenal and even more impressive by the fact that it's done by a single person. The character designs are great and the story is interesting enough to be worth playing through.” NeoGAF “...a wonderful and unique game that successfully combines RPG elements with other genres. I really enjoyed playing it.” SuperGameMan “The RPG portions of this game are fantastic. The combat, the dungeon design, and all of the combat elements are executed with precision. The dialogue is well-paced and entertaining and the final story scenes are really touching. It's also worth mentioning that the game is very well balanced and doesn't have any horrible bugs.”
