The Game Kingdom Workshop is a project that aims to create a self-sustaining economy and thus create a future independent of global finance. It is about turning the internet into a democratic, free and non-hierarchical source for entertainment. The current generation has shown a general lack of love for the internet and the way it has been shaped and moulded by a minority of corporations with the sole aim of making as much money as possible. The Game Kingdom Workshop will create a new kind of internet, an alternative to the image of the internet that is currently given to us. With it, there will be no monolithic system of financial control (only a small selection of people will be able to do the transactions, and the income will come from that); people will control their own information and people will be able to sell their work. The intention is to create a place in which people can be free, where there is no hierarchy and equality prevails. A place where you don't have to give your bank account details, where you don't have to put up with abuse or work for free. A place where everyone can, if they want to, make a contribution. There are different ways of doing this. One of them is the creation of a working model, that's what the Game Kingdom Workshop is, but there's a lot of things to be considered, like the legal and financial side of the game. The Game Kingdom Workshop is not intended to be a game with monetary values, but, what it is, is a Free Publishing Project, and we are trying to create an economy based on free publishing. The people who contribute more will be the ones who will make more money. Why it matters: Right now, the same free-for-all is occurring on the internet. There is information out there, and it's free. It's a common case of the web being used as a platform to make as much money as possible. There are commercial web-sites, like eBay, and blogs, just to name a few, that have been set up with the sole intention of exploiting the people who use the web (you). In the same way, there is not one way of creating a project. We are as different as the people who create that project are. There is a variety of ways to approach a particular situation, some will succeed and some will not. But everything is created to contribute to the goals of the project. There is no commercial

What's new:

Shadow Bines, Rocket Boots and more: a full roundup for Gungeon microtransactions Supercell has revealed some info regarding the microtransaction guns of the new game, and there are quite a few gun skins and armor to choose from. - Crate I Crate I contains a revolver, two Bazookas and a Perk Overdrive, all labelled "Zombie Blood Pump!", which comes with a 40% per level up. This perk can be consumed by any character, but it can't be revived after being used. - Crate II Crate II contains three explosive armor sets, labelled "Rocket Boots" (which gives a 20% movement speed in boots), and two shotgun armor sets, "Shadow Bines" and "Radeon's Haymaker" (these gave 5% movement speed, but have a 10% lock-on). Additionally, there are some toggles that provide bonuses. "Lead me to Glory" gives 2% movement speed, a 5% bonus to the gain rate of a boomerang, and a 10% bonus to your maximum boomerang distance. "Carry me through the night" gives 2% movement speed, a 14% damage increase, a 5% per level drop in revenant hit detection and a 15% bonus to the ammo count of shotgun shells. "Heroes in Training" gives 3% movement speed, 5% bonus to respawn rate, a 10% per level drop in revenant hit detection and a 15% bonus to the ammo count of shotgun shells. There are also gun skins, gun ammocaps, and gun mounts for each weapon for each of the themes, plus some gun skins for Agreeable, Flashy, Fiendish and Dark themes and a combination of leather and leather armor for leather themed guns. There's also a new gun called a "Shocker" that allows you to upgrade your gun right before battle, giving both 100% ammo count and a 10% damage increase to everything. Finally there are guns labelled "Fat Loot" that allow players to receive loot with a 100% chance on every mission. "Little Stars" and "Big Stars" can be used to get the highest stars in the BB gun and the "Grand Prize", respectively. A special "Jackpot" gun can be used to get one special weapon. You can use "Amnesia" to ignore past deaths and "Pickles" to have random weapons distributed on the next mission

As of right now, in my React Native app, I have two files, index.ios.js and index.android.js. In index.ios.js, I have a method called readFirst, which reads the first file from the root of my project, and saves it to./assets/kdb/kdb.json. In the read function of index.ios.js, I would like to read the second file, which I call "kdb.json", and save it to the same location that it read from, in the asset folder.
